Hildy's Father Jewish, Says Woman

UNWED NON-JEWISH MOMS
RARELY KICK ON BABIES
BEING ADOPTED BY JEWS

By ALLAN BERNFELD

Jewish Post Correspondent

MONTREAL (JP) — "I always asked Protestant and Roman Catholic girls if they objected to their babies going into Jewish homes."

"They seldom objected."

With these words, Miss Sarah Weiman summarized her baby-bootlegging activities for a Montreal newspaperman when he questioned her to get her opinion on what has been said at the Kefauver investigation of international baby-smuggling.

Miss Weiman was described in lurid terms before the Kefauver commission. She was called "a character straight out of the French Revolution" who maintained a filthy home for unwed mothers in a Montreal slum area.

SHE FREELY ADMITTED that most of her babies went to Jewish couples. She said her clients paid varying sums but the average was $600 plus extra expenses concerned with adoption papers and traveling. One couple paid $1,200, she said.

But New York attorney Ernest A. Mitler, one of the American team that came to Montreal some months ago for a joint probe here, said his investigations showed that some babies sold for as high as $3,000.

Key witness in the Chicago hearings before Kefauver's investigating subcommittee was Eugene Harry Miner, alias Sam Bodnoff, a runner whose job was smuggling babies over the border. Bodnoff described his work freely a couple of weeks ago in Weekend Picture Magazine, a photostory supplement that goes out in the week-end editions of several Canadian dailies.

MISS WEIMAN'S home is not in one of Montreal's better districts, but the area isn't a slum by local standards. And she indignantly denied that it was "filthy" or that she handled 75 to 100 babies at a time, as alleged by Miner in Chicago. She said she handled five or six a year.

She said she has been living by herself for months, without any babies on the premises, and she doesn't know what she's going to do for money.

She says "it was all nice and legal." There was always a doctor for the girls and lawyers "getting their cut." She said all her babies went into good homes, mostly those of professional men and businessmen. "I helped out lots of girls who had no money and the people who wanted the babies liked and trusted me."

Rabbinical Body
Urges Ike Aid
U. S.-Israel Pact

FALLSBURG, N. Y. (JP) — The Rabbinical Council of America (Orthodox) has urged President Eisenhower to use his offices to expedite the completion of a defense pact between the U. S. and Israel.

HOLLANDER at its annual convention here this week.

Rabbi David B. Hollander, of The Bronx, was unanimously re-elected president of the organization as were the other officers of the RCA.

Reform Temple
Closes in Jaffa;
Coercion Charged

TEL AVIV (JP) — A Reform temple, established in Jaffa several weeks ago by a 41-year-old former cantor in Bulgaria, has been abandoned because the cantor "was persecuted by the rabbinate," according to the daily MAARIV.

Cantor Abraham Behar told the paper that the temple attracted many Jews, especially lovers of music, but the Tel Aviv rabbinate "used all ways and means to combat our initiative."

With its temple gone, Behar's group has decided to get in touch with some United States Reform congregations, which, they feel, "would certainly help us."

Meanwhile, Chief Rabbi Yitzhak Nissim, who is at present, in the absence of Chief Rabbi Dr. Israel Herzog, the only chief rabbi in Israel, has said that "should a Reform rabbi settle in Israel, he would never be permitted to carry out marriages or divorces in this country."

Tunisians Want
To Keep Jewry

TUNIS — Tunisian authorities trying to avert Jewish emigration from the country have told representatives of the newly constituted Jewish Communal Council that they are going to study the possibility of granting financial support to families of intending emigrants who are in need.

The government's intentions were conveyed to the Jewish representatives after they had visited the bey and talked with Tunisian Minister of State Mougi Slim and his advisers.

The authorities would like to see Jewish emigration stop completely.

ETROGIM HARVEST BEGINS

JERUSALEM — Harvesting of etrogim began this week, according to an announcement.

Judge Refuses to Resume
Unless Ellises Show Up

BOSTON (JP) — An anonymous telephone caller who asserted that the father of Hildy McCoy, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Ellis, was Jewish, may hold the key to the controversial case.

An appeal to the press to find the mysterious woman who called him a week ago was made by James Zisman, attorney for the Ellises, who are fighting to keep their adopted daughter.

During the call, the woman, who would not identify herself, told Zisman that she used to work with Hildy's mother, Mrs. Marjorie McCoy Doherty, and that Hildy's father was a young Jewish interne. She said she would consider being a witness at the trial.

Mrs. Doherty, who bore the child out of wedlock and then gave her up for adoption, has been seeking recovery of Hildy since she discovered the little girl's foster parents were Jewish. Despite their religion, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have promised to rear the child in the Catholic faith.

ANOTHER new development in the trial is a petition to Judge James Reynolds of Norfolk probate court to hear new material evidence obtained from Mrs. Dorothy Ingersoll, a nurse who is said to have been on duty at Kenmore hospital the day Hildy was born. Zisman would not disclose what the new evidence was or what Mrs. Ingersoll told him.

With the Ellises and Hildy missing for over three weeks and sheriffs in 14 Massachusetts counties armed with papers for Hildy's surrender looking for them, Judge Reynolds has denied all petitions, however. "There will be no hearings in the matter until all parties are here in the courtroom," the judge has declared.

Up to now, the judge has twice ordered the Brookline couple to surrender Hildy to her mother. The Ellises have avoided the orders by disappearing.

THE ELLISES have claimed that they have affidavits that "give new and indisputable evidence that the mother knew the Ellises were Jewish . . . before and at the time of her written consent" to their adoption of the child.

The Ellises still run the risk of being arrested and sent to jail, however, since contempt petitions against them have been issued because they failed to obey the first court order to give up Hildy.

Outside of court, the battle has attracted the attention of experts in ecclesiastical law and opinions have been given by both Catholics and Jews.

Rabbi Melech Schachter, spiritual leader of Congregation Adath Jeshurun in The Bronx and a member of the Yeshiva university faculty, told a two-day parley of rabbinic alumni at the university that conversion of non-Jewish children without consent of the real parents is without moral justification.

"A NON-JEWISH CHILD adopted by Jewish parents remains non-Jewish," said Rabbi Schachter. "Civil adoption does not constitute conversion to Judaism," he added.

The PILOT, a BOSTON Catholic diocesan newspaper, has compared the Ellis case to the Finaly case in France, in which Catholics were forced to give up Jewish children they had adopted.

"Conditions of adoption of non-Jewish children are so complex that the total discontinuance of practice is urged," says The PILOT.

The same paper also quotes Rabbi Schachter who said: "The moral case we Jews raised in the case of the Finaly children is just as potent when it pertains to Judaizing non-Jewish children."

Ben-Gurion Hints
He'll Head Israel

JERUSALEM (JP) — David Ben-Gurion threw some more grist into the rumor mill this week when he broadly hinted he would return as Israel's premier after the July 26 election.

In an article in DAVAR, the organ of Mapai, he wrote: "It is evident that the undersigned will be responsible for the composition of the next government and its management for the next four years."

He indicated he felt certain that Mapai again would be the leading party in the Knesset.

Colored Jewish
Paper Founded

NEW YORK (WNS) — The Union of Ethiopian Hebrew Congregations and Rabbis in the United States has announced publication of AFRICAN ISRAELITE, the first such effort by Ethiopian Jewry in the United States.

The lead editorial says the Union is "happy to say colored Jewry finally has a publication of its own for the first time in history" and that the "African Israelite shall be educational as well as being the voice of Falasha Jewry on the Jewish scene." The Union plans making a census of American Negro Jewry, the first issue disclosed.

According to the publication, which takes note of the stand of the Ethiopian Jewish community against an anti-Semitic and pro-Arab group in Harlem, there are about 50,000 Falasha Jews in Ethiopia. At the same time the paper demands that the Jews in Ethiopia be given the same aid and care as the Jews in the Arab countries. It predicts early emigration of Jews from Ethiopia to Israel.

AUSTRIA AGREES TO ASSIST
JEWISH VICTIMS OF NAZIS

VIENNA — Austrian Chancellor Julius Raab and Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Committee for Jewish Claims, this week reached a final settlement for indemnification of Jewish victims of Nazism.

The agreement concluded disposed of the final question which had held up negotiations in the past, provision for former Austrian Jews living abroad who did not benefit under Austrian social legislation.

The Austrian government has agreed to make payments for 10 years into the fund for relief of persecution victims living outside Austria. Ninety-five per cent of these are Jews. Even Jews who live in Austria without having become Austrian citizens will benefit.

IT IS ESTIMATED, the NEW YORK TIMES reports, that from 15,000 to 17,000 Jewish families in the United States, Britain and Israel will receive compensation ranging from $1,500 to $3,000 for each individual.

Previously the Austrians had agreed to extend pensions and insurance payments to Jews living outside Austria. Austrian laws had already been passed under which Jews have recovered property taken from them by "Aryanization."

THE QUESTION of heirless Jewish property was disposed of by a treaty signed May 15. The treaty provides that all heirless property in Austria must be allocated to a fund for victims of political persecution in Austria.

The over-all amount involved in the agreements has not been disclosed, but is believed to be close to the demands of the Jewish committee.

The Arab nations, which had already protested against the West German indemnification payments to Israel, protested against this agreement also, though it actually involves no payment to Israel.

Vandals Damage
Two Cemeteries

NEW YORK—Twenty monuments were found overturned in two Jewish cemeteries in Glendale, Queens, recently.

At Union Field cemetery, operated by Congregation Rodeph Sholom in Manhattan, 16 monuments were overturned. Cost of righting them was estimated at $700.

At Beth-El cemetery, which adjoins Union Field and is operated by Temple Emanu-El in Manhattan, four monuments were overturned. One of them was smashed. Estimated damage was in excess of $200.

ism has been granted a charter for its Philanthropic Fund. Top officers for the organization have not been named as yet, but it "is expected that a president and vice-president will shortly be chosen, along with additional members of the Fund's board of directors."

FALLSBURG, N. Y. (JP)—A Jew may not testify against another individual if his testimony can do nothing more than create doubt or establish the person he is testifying against as a security risk. If a Jew does bear such testimony, he falls into the category of a maser (informant).

These were some of the conclusions of a paper read before the 19th annual convention of the Rabbinical Council of America (Orthodox) by Rabbi Tibor H. Stern, Halachic scholar and director of the World Academy of Jewish Studies.

The subject of his thesis was the Fifth Amendment and Jewish law.

RABBI STERN claimed that the Jewish law protected the rights of the individual better than the Constitutional law of the United States. The former, the rabbi asserted, does not permit the individual to testify against himself even if he so chooses, whereas the latter permits one to use the Fifth Amendment if he chooses, but also permits him to bear witness against himself.

Queried about the two-year-old Anatole N. Baranovsky incident, Rabbi Stern said that since Baranovsky was not testifying before a court of law where his testimony could be used to either convict or acquit a party his testimony about others could only bring them into the category which the Talmud calls hashud (under suspicion). Such testimony said the rabbi is prohibited by law.

BARANOVSKY WAS a Jewish teacher who refused to answer questions regarding subversion before the New York board of education because this would make him an informer, which he is prohibited from being by his religion. His claim was not accepted at the time because Conservative and Reform rabbis produced by the board of education lawyer did not back him up.

The Conservative rabbi, Dr. Boaz Cohen, told The POST, from his Connecticut resort, that he agreed with the premise of Rabbi Stern, but that the circumstances in the Baranovsky case were such that he (Baranovsky) had no right to refuse to testify on religious grounds.

Rabbi Stern also maintained that testimony at a Congressional committee hearing fell into the same informer category and was prohibited. However, he explained further, if a person is being tried for subversion or any other crime, it is the religious duty of any Jew to come forth and testify, even if he is not called, and either help to convict or acquit the individual.

Rabbi Silver
Seen on Cabinet

TEL AVIV (JP)—Among the persons whom David Ben-Gurion wants in his next coalition government is Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, according to a list published by the daily YEDIOT AHA-ROHOT.

Others on the list are Menahem Begin and Yohanan Bader of Herut, Generals Yigal Yadin and Moshe Dayan, and Mapai leader J. Hazan.

The report on which the list is based is unconfirmed.

Russian Jewry
Jams Synagogues

LONDON — Russia's synagogues are jammed on the Sabbath and especially during the Jewish festivals and Holy Days, a visiting Russian church delegation told a British Jewish deputation here last week. The Russian ecclesiastical dignitaries were asked and agreed to convey the greetings and good wishes of the Jewish community of Great Britain to their co-religionists in the U.S.S.R., the JEWISH CHRONICLE of London reported.

Give Your Upper Grade Students an Introduction to the Vigorous, Active United States Jewish Community Through the Pages of The POST!

These children are old enough to hear about developments, both good and bad, in the Jewish community. If they don't learn about them through good pedagogic practices in the schools, they'll hear of them through angry snatches of conversations of their elders.

The one-sided view thus received often warps the outlook of the youngster, who is dismayed by the vehemence and the bitterness displayed by various sides of the issues being argued in the Jewish group.

Top educators for nine years now have made excellent use of The POST as the starting point for explanations of the elements and contentions in the Jewish community.

By this method of giving adequate and sympathetic explanations and background, the student is led to understand the complex life in the Jewish community and the controversies are therefore accepted in their proper perspective as a step in the development of a creative Jewish community.

Rare Disease Seems to Claim Few But Jews As Its Victims

By BILL GROSSMAN
Jewish Post Correspondent

NEW YORK.

Rarely mentioned on any roster of Jewish organizations is a group known as the Dysautonomia association, Inc. It is made up of some 46 families, each with one or more children suffering from a strange and little understood disease called familial dysautonomia.

One of the strangest things about the affliction is that for a long time doctors recognized it in Jewish children only.

Another oddity is that the children who have it cry in a manner never witnessed before.

"These kids cry all right, make no mistake about that," Dr. Conrad Riley, pediatrician at New York city's Babies hospital, has explained. "It's that they don't produce tears when they do cry. Sometimes this may lead to damage to the eyes, scarring of cornea, and partial blindness. Yet, as far as we can tell, the tear glands of these children are normal."

MEDICAL ATTENTION was first focused on the disease in 1948. Only by coincidence, however, did pediatricians at Babies hospital come across two cases at the same time.

On the basis of research into past records, Dr. Riley and his colleagues discovered five cases all suffering from similar symptoms. After additional study, the disease was given its name, and articles appeared in medical journals.

"THE AUTONOMIC nervous system," explained Dr. Riley, "functions more or less independently of thought. The digestive process, for example, is something we don't have to think about. Usually we take these things for granted. But these children suffer from a disturbance of the autonomic system, and so we called the condition dysautonomia. Because the affliction runs in families—there is frequently more than one such case in a family—we called it familial dysautonomia."

So far, doctors in the United States have tabulated about 65 cases of the disease, ranging in location from Canada to Tennessee. "Out of these 65," said Dr. Riley, "we now have four children who presumably are not Jewish, although we're not certain yet that they fill the bill completely."

Dr. Riley explained why the condition appears almost exclusively in Jews by saying that it is not uncommon for diseases to be confined to certain racial groups, particularly if they have a history of not marrying outside the group.

"What we seem to have here," he said, "is a hereditary condition, transmitted through recessive genes. It would be surprising, though, if we found no cases in non-Jews."

A LETTER OF INQUIRY to the Hadassah university hospital in Jerusalem resulted in a search that seems to have discovered four new cases.

Parents of the sick children first got together about four years ago, at the suggestion of Dr. Riley.

"There were six or seven families then," Bronx dentist Dr. Harry Heyman, who is chairman of the group, told The POST. "We compared notes, tried to pick up pointers that would be of help, learned what we could expect as the children grew older."

"For example, there's a big feeding problem—these kids are all scrawny and underweight. One of the parents told us her child liked banana flakes covered with whipped cream, and so we all tried that."

"THE IMPORTANT THING, though, was to realize that we weren't alone, that there were others facing the same problems."

Most of the parents had visited allergists, neurologists, and pediatricians repeatedly, without getting any help. Dr. Heyman referred to a new family that had come into the group only a few months before.

"Their child," he said, "had been treated by neurologists and psychiatrists. The diagnoses varied from schizophrenia to cerebral palsy. All of us had experiences like that. We could not believe that these doctors, in all their years of practice, had never seen this thing before."

Even today there are many doctors unfamiliar with the work already done.

PERHAPS THE HARDEST thing for the parents to learn, said Dr. Heyman, was to adjust to the recurring illness of the child. "When the parents are scared, the child is scared. And these kids all live in fear of getting sick. If they've once gotten sick at the breakfast table, then they don't want to eat breakfast any more. After a time, the emotional problems become as severe as the organic problems."

The Bronx dentist smiled sadly, as he remarked:

"It's the happy individual who can go to his family doctor for help."

"What we want to do now is inform the public and also medical people about what we've

Big 4 Stand On Israel Urged By Rabbi Miller

NEW YORK (JP)—An appeal for a declaration at the Geneva conference "affirming Israel's right to existence as a sovereign and free nation and guaranteeing its territorial integrity" has been made by Rabbi Irving Miller, chairman of the American Zionist Council.

MILLER

"Such a declaration," said Rabbi Miller, "would go a long way toward dissolving the present atmosphere of tension in that part of the world." It would also, he added, "be the logical basis for a solemn appeal by the Big Four to the Arab leaders to sit down at a peace table with the State of Israel for direct negotiations."

learned. We'd like every doctor to understand, when he comes across these symptoms, 'this is dysautonomia!'"

Some of the parents are hesitant about having any more children, for fear of the same trouble. Others have expressed the idea, openly, that an individual aware of dysautonomia in his family would do best to marry a non-Jew.

MUCH OF THE suffering connected with dysautonomia has been alleviated. Instead of taking the child to a hospital with every attack, as was done before, some parents give the child an injection of chlorpromazine, which helps in controlling vomiting and other difficulties. Damage to the eyes can usually be circumvented by artificial tears, drops inserted into the eye periodically to keep it moist. New drugs found useful in other nervous system disturbances are under study.

Some of the children with dysautonomia are growing up and making positive adjustments, although several of the ones in the group have died of complications. One girl of 23 is a secretary and earns her own living. Another girl is enrolled in high school, goes out on dates, and generally leads a normal life.

One of the objectives of the group is to raise money for research. "If we can get people to understand that this thing exists and know what it is, and if we can raise more money for research," says Dr. Heyman, "then we'll feel that the Dysautonomia association will have accomplished a lot."

Reform Rabbis' Attitude On Pork May Be Changing

DENVER (JP)—An indication that the attitude of Reform rabbis on eating pork may be changing was seen here when a second Reform rabbi told The INTERMOUNTAIN JEWISH NEWS that he doesn't touch the stuff.

Rabbi Edgar Siskin of North Shore Congregation Israel, in Glencoe, Ill., told The Chicago DAILY NEWS that: "Being a Reform Jew does not place upon one the obligation to eat pork."

That paper then rechecked with Rabbi Maurice Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the Reform lay body, whom it had quoted earlier.

EISENDRATH

Dr. Eisendrath stuck to his guns, according to The SENTINEL, of Chicago:

"I reiterate what I said to you. Reform Jews are not bound by the dietary laws. You quote me accurately and what I told you was correct. There may, of course, be Reform Jews who abide by the dietary laws, but they do so because they want to and not because they feel they have to."

Told of the exchange by the local Anglo-Jewish paper, Rabbi Richard Hirsch, of Temple Emanuel here declared:

"Reform Jews have no obligation to eat pork. On the other hand, Reform Judaism does not prohibit eating pork. Personally, I refrain from eating it because I consider not eating pork as a sign of being a Jew."

Austrians Plan To Aid Refugees

VIENNA (WNS)—The Austrian government plans submitting a bill this fall to parliament for the establishment of a special fund to compensate persons prosecuted during the Nazi occupation who now live abroad, it was disclosed here by Finance Minister Reinhardt Kamintz.

The cabinet also approved a draft of a bill eliminating certain discriminatory provisions in the field of social insurance against emigrants from Austria because of political and racial persecution.

Boxers Never Comeback
But Guts Never Leave

By GEORGE VASS

PRIZE FIGHTERS never make a comeback—especially if they've never been anywhere. Not that an Israeli boxer Shlomo Aruch hasn't been anywhere; just that he hasn't been anywhere much in the fistic world.

As a 10-year-old in his native Greece, Shlomo pounded his little friends with such success that he became a member of the Saloniki Maccabi team, a group that held Greek boxing championships for many years. His darting gloves left so many marks on opposing physiognomies that his trainers decided to make him a professional.

Aruch's professional career was of short duration. In 1942 the Nazis swept into Greece and 16-year-old Shlomo was sent to a concentration camp. He continued his boxing there and his fights won him so much favor with the Germans that they spared his life.

In 1945 he emigrated to Israel. He eschewed the squared circle to become a porter. His prodigious strength excited the admiration of his friends, but they could persuade him to re-enter the ring only three times, all amateur fights.

A few weeks ago Shlomo Aruch, now 29, became a professional once again. The reason: David Oved was the only professional fighter in Israel. He needed a match to keep him in shape. But one fight couldn't cover the costs of bringing a suitable opponent from abroad. So Shlomo Aruch was persuaded to provide a warmup match for Italian Amleto Falcinelli.

Aruch trained faithfully. His friends and co-workers pitched in to get him into the best possible shape. Money was collected to hire a gym and to pay his expenses so he wouldn't have to work while training.

When the night of the big fight in Ramat-Gan's Ziratron arrived, Shlomo felt strong, vigorous and confident. But so did Amleto Falcinelli.

The Italian was in command all the way. But while 10 years out of the pro ranks had taken the spring out of Shlomo's legs and arms, it had left the most prized boxing ingredient of all: Guts. He went down fighting.

SOMNOLENT SAUL ROGOVIN, the erstwhile White Sox pitching star, cast adrift July 4 by Baltimore's baffled Orioles, came to anchor with the Phillies last week.

Cast into the breach Sunday as a starter by Manager Mayo Smith, Rogovin apparently fooled the Cubs into thinking he was Robin Roberts as he shut them out for three innings. But the second time around Stan Hack's boys had adjusted their bifocals and perceived they were facing Saul. They promptly loaded their bats and buffeted the ball with gay abandon until, moved by mercy, Manager Smith threw out the towel and advised Rogovin to take it to the showers.

P. S.—Rogovin's successors had nothing to crow about either, although the Phils finally were left in possession of the field, 11 to 10.

SPORTS SHORTS . . . Marv Rottblatt, one-time University of Illinois pitching star, who kicked around the majors for a while, was recently released outright by the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association. . . . Sen. Richard Neuberger (D-Ore.) has made several speeches in the Senate asking his colleagues to outlaw automobile racing. . . . Recent winner of the national epee title was Abram Cohen. . . . Latest batting averages show no improvement for Jewish major leaguers. Sid Gordon is hitting .196, Al Rosen weighs in at .236 and Cal Abrams can't boast of .226.

Finish Diaspora,
Urges Israeli

TEL AVIV (JP)—The Diaspora is one of the greatest enemies of the State of Israel and must be liquidated, former Hagana chief Israel Galili told an election meeting of his party, the Ahdut Ha'avoda.

Later, the official organ of the party, the daily LAMERHAV, quoted Galili as saying: "Among the great enemies of Israel, like the empty desert and the danger of a 'second round,' is this other great danger, the cursed Diaspora, which we are compelled to liquidate."

Israel Aids
Unwed Mothers

TEL AVIV (JP)—A grant of 50 Israel pounds for purchasing baby equipment, ordinarily provided mothers of newly born babies by Israel's National Insurance institute, was granted to the mothers of three babies born out of wedlock in a Beer-sheba hospital recently.

Hospitalization also was paid for by the institute.

The decision compelling the Insurance institute not to discriminate against illegitimate babies and their mothers was made by the National Insurance Tribunal in Jerusalem.

MIRIAM DESPISES SISSIES.

SHE'S ROUGH, TOUGH AND READY FOR HUSBAND WHO'LL BE A BOSS

By LEB HACON

Jewish Post Correspondent

Who says a woman always wants to be boss?

Miriam Prulov, a 24-year-old sabra, is one of the prettiest girls a man could meet. It's more than even money that had she consented to her name being submitted to the annual Miss Israel contest she'd have carried away honors with very little effort.

Miriam doesn't care about being a beauty queen, however. What she wants, and cannot get, is a husband who is tough enough to be her boss.

I first met Miriam several years ago, when I was still in the Army. She was then the first Israeli girl graduate of a paratroopers' school to get her wings as a professional parachutist.

AFTER HER MILITARY service, Miriam, who was born in a kibbutz, joined the training staff of new agricultural settlements and became, of all things, a cowboy instructor. She first had to learn how to handle horses herself, but she instructed boys and girls how to do real herd riding.

One Israeli cowgirl, 22-year-old Aliza Heinman, lost both legs while defending her herd from the Egyptians this year.

After a while, Miriam found herself a new job; she became Israel's first girl blasting expert. Large quantities of explosives are used in Israel every day to blast stone and granite in the quarries, blast new roads, and blow up entire rocky hills to prepare the ground for new houses. Up to now, however, all the blasting experts have been men, mostly former Army engineers and saboteurs.

WITH HER LOVE for dangerous work, Miriam has not only learned how to use explosives and supervise important blasting jobs, but even handles nitroglycerine as if it were perfume.

"I don't worry about making a mistake," she says, "because in this business if you make a mistake it's your last . . . you never know you made one."

Pay for blasting is high, and Miriam makes more money than she can spend on lipstick and fine clothes, which she uses only on holidays, going around on work days in slacks and a khaki shirt.

When she dresses up, Miriam is as feminine as they come. Her lustrous black hair is wound around her head in luxurious long tresses, and her skin, which she manages to keep soft in spite of her work in the sun and dust, is the color of ripe peaches.

THOUGH SHE WOULD like to get married and has had hundreds of propositions, men feel uncomfortable in Miriam's presence. They like to be chivalrous and play the hero in front of a pretty girl, but they know that compared to her they are small fry.

There are men, of course, who are perfectly willing to assume a secondary role in the family, but Miriam doesn't want spineless creatures. "What I want," she says, "is a man with a personality and character stronger than mine, who can make the decisions and order me around. I need a husband . . . not a doormat."

Sometimes, men who don't know Miriam see her in her Saturday clothes and try to take advantage of her. What happens then is that the pretty and soft-looking girl, who learned judo and unarmed combat in the paratroops, knocks them out cold with as little effort as if she swatted a fly.

Such efficiency doesn't gain

MIRIAM PRULOV
Too Tough For Men

many friends. Men are afraid of getting hurt, and women are afraid of someone so different. Still, Miriam is not unhappy. She keeps blasting, thinks of taking a course in underwater demolition, one of the most dangerous jobs in the world, and dreams of getting a man good enough for her.

Pen Pals

The following Israelis would like to correspond with American boys and girls. Ten names will be printed weekly. Young readers of THE POST, who want to write to Israelis, and do not find the age or a name that attracts them, may write directly to The Post, Box 1633, Indianapolis post office. Names submitted this way will be printed in THE JERUSALEM POST, English language daily newspaper, by special arrangement, in the same manner as the names are printed below. A line or so about your hobbies or interests would be helpful.

Young Americans who receive interesting letters as they correspond with Israelis are invited to submit them to The Post. Those judged best will be printed in this column from time to time.

Zionism Seen
As Bankrupt
By Writer

STARLIGHT, Pa.—The Zionist movement of today is bankrupt and has failed completely to offer up a new Zionism for our time, Dr.

Trude Weiss-Rosmarin, author and editor of the JEWISH SPECTATOR, told the second B'nai B'rith Institute of Judaism at Camp B'nai B'rith.

"The Zionist movement today," said Dr. Rosmarin, "is largely a holdover of both men and ideas from an age when specific Zionist achievements were made; achievements which culminated in the formation of the State of Israel."

Another noted scholar to participate in the institute was Dr. Theodore Gaster.

Dr. Gaster, of Dropsie college, charged that contemporary Jewish institutions had failed to bring Jews to a sense of dedication to Torah.

Dr. Rosmarin ridiculed the idea of building cultural bridges between American Jewry and Israel and felt that not only was the term not clear but that the break between the two cultures was so sharp that no possible bridge could be built. Dr. Rosmarin analyzed the recent book on Zionism by Dr. Mordecai Kaplan and concluded that the "new Zionism" was wholly inadequate for modern conception of Zionism.

Give Miss Israel a Piano And You Can Keep Titles

NEW YORK (JP)—Get her a baby grand piano instead of a diamond ring, and Miss Israel is as good as yours.

Miss Israel of 1955, 19-year-old Ilana Carmel of Haifa, is now in the United States to participate in the Miss Universe contest.

Before she left Haifa, however, Miss Carmel was ready to give up her crown and her title and everything that goes with them if somebody would just give her a piano, even a second-hand piano.

"Unfortunately," there were no offers. Poor, beautiful Ilana had to leave for California and the grinding ordeal of trying to be Miss Universe.

Israel's first beauty is a little bit on the chubby side by American standards, but quite slender compared to her predecessors in Israel. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighs about 122 pounds.

She was selected by an election held under the personal patronage of Abba Hushi, Haifa's mayor, and was considered by the judges as the most beautiful girl among the contestants.

The crowd that attended the selection, mostly young Israelis —married women are permitted who are serving or have served in the armed forces, agreed with the judges. Thinner and more fragile girls, even if prettier, didn't stand a chance with them.

Their votes went to the solid, healthy, outdoor types of girls who used as little makeup as possible.

Also judging by Miss Israel and her deputies and the queens of Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, and Haifa, the Israelis do not want their women fat, just firm and fresh. The girls must have shapely legs, too, a very important point with most women going around in shorts.

Girls chosen as beauty queens are selected from about half of Israel's population. There are several reasons for the limitation.

FIRST, AND MOST important, is the fact that the contests are run by the magazine LAISHA, a publication similar to The LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, as a publicity stunt. Girls send their pictures and specifications to the magazine, which publishes them weekly. Since not all girls read LAISHA and since some who do read it do not want their pictures and particulars spread all over its front page, many pretty girls are missed right at the start.

Other girls do not enter the contests because their parents, boy friends, fiancées, or husbands young man with a piano.

Some parents who object to their daughters entering do so on the ground that the contests are immoral. Others feel that walking around in a bathing suit in front of a crowd cheapens a girl's good name.

Among the husbands, there is strong feeling against wives' participation.

MISS ISRAEL of 1955 was born in Tientsin, China, in 1936, one year before the Japanese attacked. She was named Lily Prezhensky. Her parents were Russian Jews who escaped from the Reds after the Bolshevik revolution.

She came to Israel more than six years ago and changed her name to Ilana Carmel, "the palm of the Carmel."

After she finished school, she worked as a secretary in a business office until June 26, when she was elected Miss Israel.

Her only ambition, now, is to play the piano. That was why she publicly declared that she was ready and willing to give up everything even for a second-hand piano.

A piano is not all Miss Carmel needs, however. Unless she gets married soon, she'll have to serve two years in the army—her service was deferred until now—and postpone her piano dreams.

Here is the chance for the young man with a piano.

My Queendom for a Piano

Miss Israel of 1955, 19-year-old Ilana Carmel, who is in the United States to participate in the Miss Universe contest in California, arrives in New York aboard an El Al Airlines plane. Miss Carmel says that if anyone had offered her a piano, even a second-hand one, to give up everything connected with being Israel's beauty queen, including the trip to the United States, she would have accepted the offer.

PART FOUR

ARRANGED FROM THE STORY OF NOAH IN THE BOOK OF GENESIS - CHAPTERS 6, 7, 8 AND 9 -

SCRIPT BY MONTGOMERY MUIFORD
ILLUSTRATED BY DON CAMERON
COMPILED 1945 BY H.E. JAMES

THE LORD SPEAKS AGAIN... IT SHALL BE A TOKEN TO YOU THAT MANKIND WILL NOT BE DESTROYED BUT WILL LIVE IN HOPE OF A BETTER WORLD!!

SO THE RAINBOW OF HOPE WAS BORN AND POINTED THE WAY TO NOAH

NOAH FULFILLS GOD'S COMMANDS... IN HIS OLD AGE HE PLANTS A VINEYARD! FATHER, ARE YOU HAPPY NOW? YES, LET US GO HOME, MY SONS!

NOAH LIVED TO BE NINE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS OLD AND THEN HE DIED

WE MUST GO ON LIVING GOOD LIVES, THO OUR FATHER IS GONE. FOR GOD CHOSE HIM OF ALL MANKIND TO PRESERVE THE HUMAN RACE. WE MUST HONOR HIS NAME BY LIVING RIGHTLY!

END

NEVER AGAIN WILL THE WORLD BE FLOODED - IN THIS WAY SHALL I NEVER AGAIN DESTROY THE EARTH - IT IS MY PLEDGE TO YOU, NOAH, AND YOUR DESCENDANTS!

NOAH AND HIS SONS AND THEIR CHILDREN AND ALL THE LIVING CREATURES LEAVE THE ARK

SO THE WORLD WAS CLEANSSED, AND THE SONS OF NOAH BUILT NEW HOMES, AND ALL THE CREATURES MULTIPLIED AND INHABITED THE EARTH

AND GOD TOLD NOAH AND HIS SONS TO BE FRUITFUL, AND BLESSED THEM ALL, AND GAVE THEM LAWS TO LIVE BY

REPLENISH THE EARTH, BUT KILL YOU NOT ONE ANOTHER! - FOR WHO SHEDS BLOOD, HIS BLOOD SHALL BE SHED ALSO!

Even Israel Has Its Share Of Luxury Style Mansions

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA—We went out house-hunting the other day. We are quite comfortable and satisfied in our modest apartment, thank you, but friends from abroad frequently write us inquiring about more luxurious accommodations—the kind of house in which an American family might be willing to retire in some comfort.

ALPERT

Despite the building boom which has been going on for years, an empty house is still hard to find. This is particularly true of the so-called luxury type home, but we managed to find two interesting and contrasting examples which should be of some interest. Both are located on Mount Carmel, of course, since we can not conceive of any intelligent American family wanting to live anywhere else in Israel.

On one of the highest spots of the Carmel range, in the midst of a large pine grove, stands the pink building which is known far and wide as Lady Downes' mansion. The Lady, a niece of the British General Allenby, had the home built for her in 1938, and though she engaged a local architect, she gave him full instructions. She showed him photographs of 400-year-old baronial estates in England—and commissioned him to duplicate one of those buildings. Thus it is that we have a 16th Century castle, built like a fortress, but with 20th Century equipment and installations.

THERE IS A TREMENDOUS living room, a dining room, two master bedrooms, servants' quarters and six—count them—toilets. Windows, porches, balconies command a magnificent vista of the Haifa peninsula, and the sea on both sides. In the garden are grapes, plums, apricots and figs, among other fruits.

I called the house a fortress?

The present occupant complains that the walls are so massive it is impossible to drive a nail into them anywhere. The Lady took no chances.

We peeked into the kitchen. A pantry? There are five separate pantry rooms!

Present occupant is Moussa Levy, born in Haifa over 50 years ago, his wife and two children.

When Lady Downes selected this neighborhood she was out in the wilderness, but things don't stand still in Israel. The neighborhood has preserved its aspects of being a private park, but other homes have been built, and a modern shopping center is not far away.

A HOME in the modern style was next on the list. It is located on Margalit st., Mount Carmel, near the edge of a sheer drop down into a plunging canyon, which drops away to the sea. The scenery is breathtaking, but this is no place for people who are disturbed by heights. One thing can be absolutely certain for the people who live in this house atop the cliff: Nobody is ever going to build in front of them and obstruct their view.

This place has none of the massiveness of Lady Downes' mansion. Though the number of rooms is about the same, I counted only three toilets. Of the four porches, some hang out toward the sea, and others over the almond tree in the garden. The grounds have been beautifully landscaped and kept in good condition. Here and there a new chandelier might have to be put in, but the structure, put up around 1939, is in excellent condition. You've heard the old story: They don't build them today as strong and as sturdy as they used to in those days.

BOTH HOUSES have attached garages; both have automatic oil heating. And both have a novel feature: Deep storage tanks for the accumulation of rain

They Say

I. N. Steinberg, Russian People's Commissar of Justice in 1917-18 and today head of the Freeland League for Jewish Colonization:

"It is doubtful whether the Jewish people can be held together only by the idea of, and devotion to, a Fatherland. . . . It would be difficult to bind the Jewish people together in a patriotic fervor around their State while there is alive the other idea of 'the King of the King of Kings'—the rebellious idea of the Jewish religion. Even the idea of a Jewish 'model state' which should embrace in its framework the Chosen People can hardly appeal in an epoch witnessing the decline of statehood as such. In the midst of the Jewish people stood not the majestic throne of royalty, but the invisible glory of the Mount of Sinai." Rabbi Jacob Riemer, student of Jewish life:

"The American settler must come (to Israel) expecting frustration, disappointment, and despair. But if there are still those to whom difficulties represent challenges, to whom problems are responsibilities, and to whom beginnings mean opportunities, then Israel is a land that will beckon and inspire."

water during the rainy season. There is an ample supply of city water, but rain water has its special uses. In the washing machine it needs no added softeners, and makes all those soap and detergent ads come true. What is more, you have never truly tasted tea unless it has been made from rain water. We tried a cup of hot rain water tea, with lemon, and must admit that it provided a new and pleasant sensation.

So, if any of my friends are going to be in Haifa, and are thinking of settling down in a better than average home, I shall be glad to take them on a tour of these two pieces of property. Besides, the owner tells me, I'll get a commission if I make a sale!

Canaanites Products Of New York, Not Israel

by M. Z. FRANK

Before the month of Tamuz goes by, let me write that column about the so-called Canaanites. (Tamuz, this year, is from June 20 to July 19.) In the East European ghetto, Tamuz was considered the month when heat affected the minds of men and beasts. In ancient times, Tamuz was supposed to be the god of something or other in the Canaanite-Phoenician—or was it Babylonian—mythology. Anyway, it is a good month to write about the Canaanites.

"Canaanite" has been a dirty word since the days of the Bible. They were the filthy idol worshippers who practiced all those abominations against which the prophets inveighed. I learned that at Hebrew school. But then, when I began to study ancient history at high school, I discovered that the Canaanites were the Phoenicians and that the Phoenicians had invented the alphabet, measures, dyes, ships, colonies and what not. And that their language was Hebrew.

THEN I LEARNED that Carthage was a Canaanite colony in Africa and that its original name was Kareth Hadasheth, or New City, and that Hannibal, the greatest general of all times, who commanded the Carthaginian forces against Rome also spoke Hebrew, that his name was really Hanni-baal, and that the original designation of what the Romans called the Carthaginian "senate" was sufetim, that is shoftim. (The Carthaginians were not Litvacks, but the Latin alphabet and language have no sound of "sh.") So I developed a soft spot for the Canaanites, in spite of the Bible. In later life I found out I was not the only Jew who felt that way.

But not Rabbi Mordecai Kirshblum, or Shmuel Niger, or Mendel Elkin, or Milton Himmelfarb. They still think Canaanite is a dirty word. A year ago this summer, Rabbi Kirshblum delivered a speech at the Zionist Actions committee session in Jerusalem from which I gathered that he kept on bumping into Canaanites when walking the streets of Tel Aviv.

THE MORAL WAS it was the business of the Zionist movement to save Israel from the Canaanites. Well, I never bumped into any Canaanite on the streets of Tel Aviv, Jerusalem or Haifa. It took me nearly two years of looking for Canaanites and inquiring about them until I found one. Well, maybe a member of the Actions committee has greater facilities. Or maybe he has a reason. For, if not to root out Canaanites, what other reason is there for the continued existence of the Actions committee?

Milton Himmelfarb published an article in the JEWISH FRONTIER some months ago, in which he decried the existence of Canaanites in Israel. I phoned him and asked if he ever spoke to a Canaanite, and he said he had never seen one. That must be because he is not a member of the Zionist Actions committee. But he had been reading the Yiddish press in New York, and he got the idea Israel was crawling with young Canaanites.

LET ME HASTEN TO AS-SURE you that not even a member of the Actions committee or a reader of The JEWISH DAY—MORNING JOURNAL expected that Hannibal in the flesh or Jezebel in the flesh walked the streets of Tel Aviv, or even that their ghosts sat in Cafe Cassit. They were referring to a movement of young Israelis who maintained that they had more in common with the ancient Phoenicians than with Jews in the Diaspora today.

My friend Mendel Elkin, who had never been a Zionist but who now loves Israel and spends sleepless nights worrying over its welfare, once said to me: "Something must be very wrong with Israel, if it could produce one Canaanite." He never said something was wrong with America if it could produce one McCarthy, or one William Zuckerman, or that something was wrong with American Jewry if it could produce one Elmer Berger. But Israel is on strict probation. That's because he has never been a Zionist. A Zionist needs Canaanites to show what might happen to Israel if Zionists did not watch over it. As a result of this double-barrelled solicitude, the number of articles in America against the Canaanites in Israel is about 15½ times the number of all youngsters who ever, even for a brief time, belonged to that movement. (It is a movement with very few members and a very large turnover.)

See what Israel can do: produce youngsters who . . . well, you know. Maurice Samuel, in his "Level Sunlight," calls it "Sundering."

The joke is on all these worriers: The Canaanite movement was not produced in Israel, but in New York. At least, the father of the idea lives in New York, and he did not come here from Israel. The literary roots of the movement are to be found in Tchernikhovsky and other Hebrew poets in Russia.

Israeli Papers

Blast Satmar

Rebbe As 'Enemy'

TEL AVIV (JP) — Some Israeli newspapers have violently attacked Rabbi Yoel Teitelbaum, the Satmar Rebbe who came from New York to lead the Naturel Karta in a boycott against the Knesset elections.

"A sworn enemy of the State of Israel," they are calling him. One paper ZEMANIM, has expressed astonishment at Israel's tolerance in letting an "enemy" come from abroad with the express purpose of dissuading the religious community from participating in the elections. It is a marvel, it says, that the authorities have not only not escorted him out of the country, but even placed a special train at his disposal when he arrived.

"Is this not ridiculous liberalism?" the paper asks.

Another paper, the evening daily YEDIOT AHARONOT has requested that the Satmar Rebbe be expelled from Israel and "all those who are responsible for the permission given to the rebbe to come and stay in this country, which he hates so much," be punished.

U. S. Bank Sells Israel Pounds

INDIANAPOLIS (JP)—Through a special arrangement with the Palestine Discount Bank Limited, it has been made possible for Americans to buy Israel pounds.

Under the arrangement, pounds may be purchased here for 56 cents. There are no deductions, and the entire amount in pounds will be received by the recipient.

The arrangement was completed by the American Fletcher National Bank and Trust Co., 108 N. Pennsylvania st., here, and persons may take advantage of the offer by mail.

The new plan makes it easier to send aid to relatives and friends in Israel, Emo Hopkins, head of the bank's foreign department, told The POST. Recipients now may purchase what they need most by buying from the large supplies of all items now available in Israel, and avoid spoilage, import taxes, etc.

Israelis Attend Rally In Poland

TEL AVIV (JP)—About 200 young Israelis will attend the Communist-sponsored Festival of Democratic Youth in Warsaw, Poland, in August, it was reported officially by a Communist spokesman here.

Among the young Israelis are over 70 singers in the Israeli Communist choirs, Ron and George Dimitrov, as well as a large group of Yemenite dancers. Over 40 members of the group are Israeli Arab members of the Communist party.

The Yemenite Jews going to the festival will be the first to be seen in a country behind the Iron Curtain.

THE DIGEST OF THE YIDDISH PRESS

Status of the Jews
Tests Russ Sincerity

by Rabbi Samuel M. Silver

The leaders of Soviet Russia may maintain that the matter is an internal one. Nonetheless, President Eisenhower would do well to find some time to ask the Kremlinites what is to be the fate of Russian Jewry. So says the DAY-JOURNAL in an editorial commenting upon memoranda addressed to the American delegation at Geneva by the B'nai B'rith, the Jewish Labor Committee, and the Jewish Pen (Poets, Essayists and Novelists) Club.

Discussing the matter in his column, the DAY-JOURNAL's A. Glantz recalls that it has been seven years since the curtain went down on Jewish writers in Russia. Since then nothing has been heard from them despite repeated inquiries.

Glantz asserts that once again the Jew will be a barometer of the spiritual level of a nation; the best way to ascertain the sincerity of Russian reformation will be the status of the Jew. The DAY-JOURNAL editor deplores the fact that other Jewish organizations did not join in sending memoranda to the President before Geneva.

PROSKAUER'S POETRY IS PROUDEST SKILL

Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, the distinguished honorary president of the American Jewish Committee, one-time campaign manager for Al Smith, former justice of the New York Supreme Court, great lawyer, one of the builders of the 92d St. YMHA, nephew of a participant in the Battle of Gettysburg, has many talents. But one skill of which he is proudest is that of writing poetry.

When the great 78-year-old jurist was interviewed by S. Regensberg, of the FORWARD, he was reluctant to talk about himself. But he did freely express his delight over his poems. The one that brought him most gratification was a tribute to Toscanini. When the maestro saw the poem, which was printed in The NEW YORK TIMES, he besought Jascha Heifetz to introduce him to Proskauer. The resultant meeting is one of the most memorable in Proskauer's long gallery of pleasant recollections.

Regensberg reports that Proskauer is equally proud of the role he played in securing the independence of the State of Israel.

LITERARY RECORD
NEEDED FOR MINSK

Wanted: A memory book of Minsk Gubernia, the famous Russian county which, according to Daniel Charney, in The DAY, was the birthplace of hundreds of the world's best-known Jews. Many landsmanschaften have underwritten the histories of many European areas, many of which were Hitlerized. These books are often called Yizkor volumes. But Minsk, which includes the famous city of Pinsk, is without a suitable literary record.

Some Minskians listed by Charney: Chaim Weitzmann, Gen. David Sarnoff, Mendeley Mocher Sforim, Eugene Lyons (the writer, whose real name is Moshke Gebelyev), Solomon Maimon, Shmariyah Levin, S. Niger, Rabbi Max Raisin, etc., etc.

COOL REFRESHMENTS HANDY ON HOT SUMMER EVENINGS

By SARAH LIEBER

Our nice new garden chairs, and the old ones, recovered and repainted, have been much used these July nights. Neighborhood friends drop by to sit with us and enjoy what evening breezes there are. By agreement, we all keep summer-time refreshments simple and easy to prepare.

The refrigerator is stocked with iced-tea, which I like to serve half and half with reconstituted frozen lemonade. Whenever I stew fresh fruits or berries for dessert I like to reserve some of the strained juice to mix with water for a cooling drink. Sometimes a large spoonful of sherbet is a nice addition to the drink. We enjoy these simple drinks much more than the bottled ones. And the vitamin C in fruits is said to be a hot-weather necessity.

It's nice to have cookies to pass with the tall cool drinks, so I try to keep some on hand. They are a good accompaniment to fruit desserts for the family, too. No matter how copious the recipe file there is always some new variety of cookie to added to the repertoire. I'd like to share with you some geschmak recipes given me by friends. They are easy and quick to make, and sure to be popular.

SEMI-SWEET BISCUITS

3 tbsps. butter
¼ cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
1 egg
1 tbsps. sherry or brandy
2 cups flour

Blend butter and sugar. Beat in whole egg. Add flavoring. Reserve 2 tablespoonsful of the flour, and set aside to be used in kneading. Sift salt and remaining flour. Blend into mixture. Knead until smooth, using the reserved flour to prevent sticking. Roll out on lightly floured board or pastry cloth until ¼-inch thick. Cut in squares using a knife or pastry wheel. Prick each square with a fork. Bake on greased cookie sheet 13 to 15 minutes at 350 degrees.

SUGAR AND NUT BALLS

½ pound butter
2 tbsps. sugar
½ tsp. almond flavoring
1 cup flour
¾ cup finely ground nuts
confectioners' sugar

Soften butter at room temperature. Blend in sugar, flavoring and flour. Stir in nuts. Form into small balls, the size of a marble. Bake 15 to 20 minutes at 350 degrees. Roll in confectioners' sugar while still warm.

UNBAKED LEMON

CHIFFON PIE

1 pkg. lemon gelatin.
½ cup boiling water
½ cup lemon juice
½ cup sugar
4 eggs, separated
graham crackers or vanilla wafers
whipped cream, if desired
Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Cool. Beat egg yolks slightly. Stir in sugar and lemon juice. Cook slowly, either in top of double boiler or over very low flame, stirring constantly until thick. Cool, then blend with gelatin mixture. Place in refrigerator until thick but not set. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into mixture. On the bottom and sides of a lightly greased 9-inch pie pan place the crackers or cookies so that they overlap. Carefully pour in the mixture. Chill two hours or until set. Garnish with whipped cream or any desired fruit. Serves six.

FROZEN CHEESE SALAD

1 pound cottage cheese
salt and pepper to taste
½ cup coarsely chopped nuts
¼ cup chopped stuffed olives
½ cup heavy cream
Stir seasoning into cheese. Add nuts and olives, and blend well. Whip cream and fold into the cheese mixture. Place in greased refrigerator ice tray or mold. Freeze over night. Unmold carefully on a bed of shredded lettuce or other greens. Garnish with olive slices and a little paprika. Cut in slices to serve. Very nice to serve with a vegetable dinner. Serves 4 to 6.

A Word To The Wives

Appetites lag on hot days, so the thoughtful balaboste tries to put novelty and eye appeal into the menu.

Sometimes the same nourishment may be coaxied into the family in a salad or cold vegetable soup instead of too many hot dishes. But try not to have everything cold at a meal. A cup of hot soup, a casserole of hot potato pudding, or lokshen kugel, or whatever family favorite you can think of will add to the interest as well as the nutrition.

And don't forget something a little more heavily salted than usual.

WOMEN'S VIEWPOINT

By HELEN COHEN

All Jews, Even Rabbis
Need More Literature

Perhaps it's just that I'm always drawn to a list, but I have one for you today. My excuse is that the writer seems to have a good reason for deserving whatever little boost my including his list here will mean.

Author Charles Angoff, writing in the ADULT JEWISH EDUCATION NEWSLETTER (Summer, '55) of the Conservative United Synagogue of America, points out that if the masses are ignorant of such subjects as Jewish history or the Jewish classics at least their leaders and rabbis are up on such subjects and are even getting across to the people some knowledge of "Humash, the Talmud, the philosophy of Rambam, the history of Zionism."

But, complains Angoff, not only the masses, but the leaders themselves are unacquainted with American Jewish literature. "It has to be taught not only to lay adults, but also to a large proportion of the rabbinate and even to Jewish cultural leaders..." And yet he feels that "good works of fiction have from time immemorial provided more insight into life than have so-called factual works."

TAKING AN EXAMPLE, Angoff believes "The Rise of David

Levinsky" by Abraham Cahan, with its setting among the immigrants of 50 years ago," can be read on different levels—as literature, history, sociology, economics, politics."

He concludes by recommending a starting list for every Jewish American home, and since he doesn't include his own works we might add a novel or two of his to the group. (The descriptions are his):

"Singermann," by Myron Brinig. A moving story of Jewish life in Montana.

"The Rise of David Levinsky," by Abraham Cahan. The first and perhaps still the best Jewish novel.

"Aaron Traum," by Hyman and Lester Cohen. Jewish immigrant life on the East Side.

"Face of a Hero," by Louis Falstein. An impressive novel about Jews in World War II.

"The Island Within," by Ludwig Lewisohn. Memorable work about Jew who tries not to be a Jew.

"This Land, These People and These Your Children," edited by Harold Ribalow. Superb short stories.

"Go Fight City Hall," by Ethel Rosenberg. Authentic Jewish dialogue and real characters.

"The Education of Hyman Kaplan," by Leonard Q. Ross. Well-known book of sketches.

"Call It Sleep," by Henry Roth. Extraordinary novel about Jewish immigrant boy.

"The Old Bunch," by Meyer Levin. A massive chronicle of Chicago's Jews.

"Mixed Company," by Irwin Shaw. A fine collection of short stories.

"Hungry Hearts," by Anzia Yezierska. Another collection of short stories.

"What's the Big Hurry?" by James Yaffe. A novel about a contemporary David Levinsky.

IN ANSWER to those who feel that my remarks don't fit beneath the title "Women's Viewpoint," I agree.

I have never pretended to speak for anyone but myself, although I believe that with my background, growing up in a small Jewish community and now trying to raise our children in the hinterlands, that I convey the feelings of the average American Jewish woman who lives away from the large Jewish centers.

But to get back to the heading, it was, incidentally, eight years ago this month that this

MUSIC

GOOD DISTRIBUTOR CAN DO A LOT
TO BOOST JEWISH DISC INDUSTRY

By JOSEPH GALE

The most painful thorn the Jewish record industry has suffered in its long struggle against extinction is the total lack of responsible leadership in the field of distribution, whose moguls are slightly disreputable or basically disinterested in working hard for small returns. Some unscrupulous ones have had great fun tying the manufacturer up in all kinds of deals—to his subsequent discouragement, not caring that a happy and productive manufacturer is the fountainhead of their income.

As a result, Jewish recordings have foundered in a welter of uninteresting and poorly produced releases, and in an apparent effort on the part of the distributor never to allow good taste to aid and abet his sales.

Gradually, the industry drifted into a philosophy of quick profits, and there it is now. And there it probably would remain except for the determination of Z've Kronish of The House of Menorah. You remember Menorah Little Records, those horrible pastiches for children which were so successful, and are being used still? Well, about a year ago the proprietors decided to do more with the company, and Kronish came in on the basis that he have a free hand to develop the firm's many potentials.

ONE, HE FELT, was to smite the opposition a mighty blow and revitalize the industry with a program of distributor leadership benefiting manufacturer and retailer alike. This momentous decision was arrived at a year ago, and what he has accomplished since is to send the opposing forces reeling in confusion and for the first time in a long time engage the jaundiced attention of the retail dealers.

It didn't take much, simply an honest approach, and a desire to be reputable and do good. The House of Menorah has nearly every Jewish record company in the bag now on a sole or partial distribution basis, and the ideas Kronish has for marketing records and making them attractive to the purchaser are practical and stimulating.

The coming year should be extremely productive, since already a few retailers have responded with surprise and pleasure to the blandishments of the House of Menorah, and others will follow. The real trick will be to interest non-Jewish record stores in carrying Jewish records and making motions to advertise and display them. This, of course, presupposes a product of some worth, and this in turn should put record manufacturers on their mettle. See what, in the long run, one really good distributor can do for the industry?

A HISTORY OF THE THEATRE, by George Freedley and John A. Reeves (Crown, $6), is a 784-page compendium loaded to the nines with reference data and photographs. It was impossible for this reader to go through its jam-packed pages with anything like scholastic calm, but various references to Jewish theatre and plays about Jews are valuable and interesting.

Most of the plays detailed are pro-Semitic ones, and the Jewish theater is not the one we know here in the United States, but, for instance, the Jewish stage in Germany during the day of Hitler and in other European countries through those troubled times. The book is really an encyclopedia, and to be recommended.

Letters to the Correspondence Club should be limited to 50 words. They may be addressed to any office of The POST as shown on the editorial page.

Dear Pen Pals:

Being a dreamer and hoping one day I'd see such an idea as pen pals from Israel for a change in one of our own newspapers, my heart tempo was jolted forward when I recently beheld the correspondence column. I've not known of The POST long enough, else I'd have been a veteran subscriber by now and realized the paper carried a pen pal department before.

My main hobby at the moment appears to be boredom, which I'm trying to ditch desperately. My prime interest in life at this time is in Israel, and those books, magazines, newspapers and what have you that deal with the beloved country.

I would like to write to an Israeli girl in my age bracket, which is 21, or mayhap she could be younger.

MATTHEW ROSEN

Woodbury, N.J.

corner began. One of the powers of The POST, I believe the editor, plucked that title out of the air, and there it's been ever since. If anyone had asked me, not at first, of course, how was I to know how my efforts would turn out, but later, I would have said that Carl Alpert's heading might have been more appropriate over my work—"I Think As I Please."

But I am, after all, representing the female viewpoint on the paper, and it may be easier for the editor if a change in heading is slight, so if he wishes, I settle for "One Woman's Viewpoint."

Or would you readers like to choose a new name for me? (Let's be polite now.)

LEONARD ROSENTHAL, 83, PHILANTHROPIST, DIES

NEW YORK—Leonard Rosenthal, 83, whose philanthropies prior to World War I were so impressive that the French government honored him as a Commander of the Legion of Honor, died here July 16.

Mr. Rosenthal made his fortune in pearls. By 1914, his fortune in gems and real estate was valued at more than $100 million. After the war, when the development of the cultured pearl adversely affected his business, he served as agent for many of the dispossessed members of Russian nobility.

In 1940, when the Germans invaded France, Mr. Rosenthal abandoned his business and real estate holdings, then valued at $5 million, and fled to Portugal. In the United States since 1940, he was an importer and exporter here. Among his published books is his autobiography, entitled "The Pearl Hunter."

Mr. Kaber is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sophia Kaber, two daughters, Mrs. Rosalind Davidson, Mrs. Arline Raymer, a son, Rabbi Nathan Kaber of Altoona, Pa., and three grandchildren.

Isaac M. Wise, 71

CINCINNATI—Isaac M. Wise, whose late father, Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, established Hebrew Union college here and founded Reform Judaism in the United States, died July 10. He was 71. Mr. Wise, a graduate of the University of Cincinnati, earned a law degree by night study at the YMCA. He was a lawyer, a Mason, and an amateur historian.

S. Richard Nathanson, 64

BALTIMORE — S. Richard Nathanson, 64, who had been affiliated with the Associated Jewish Charities and a number of its beneficiary agencies since 1925, died July 4. Mr. Nathanson was financial secretary of the Levindale Hebrew Home and Infirmary, secretary-treasurer of the Jewish Board of Arbitration, a member of the board of the Hebrew Free Loan association, and had been on the staff of the Associated Jewish Charities for 26 years.

Morris Herbst, 85

NEWARK—Morris Herbst, 85, the last surviving member of the original board of directors of Beth Israel hospital here, died July 9. Mr. Herbst was on the boards of directors of the Daughters of Israel Home for the Aged, Congregation Oheb Shalom, and Ezekiel B'nai B'rith lodge, of which he was a founder. He was also a founder and former director of the West Side Trust company. He retired from the wholesale meat business in 1943.

Your Name

Want to know what your name means? Address your question to Mr. Pearlroth, National Jewish Post, Box 1633, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.

By N. PEARLROTH

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: Would you please advise me of the origin of our family name. My father came from Daszow in Russia.—BERNICE R. GLASMAN, Brooklyn.

GLASMAN is a trade name and ordinarily means a man who is either a glazier or a trader in glass. However, since your town of origin is in the Ukraine I assume that your ancestor was a craftsman in a glass factory. The production of glass in Russia was originally a German craft and technicians retained their original German designations. For that reason your forebear was known as a glasman instead of being tagged with the Slavonic synonym of Sklar or Szklarz.

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: Could you please tell me the meaning of the name Skudin. As far as I know it is of Russian-Polish origin.—HARRY SKUDIN, Greensboro, N.C.

SKUDIN is a name of geographical origin. It is derived from the name of the small town of Szkudy in Samogitia, Lithuania. In the 16th century the town was colonized by German immigrants who renamed it Johannisberg. The original name was restored a century later, otherwise your family name might have been Johannisberger now.

cantile division of the Allied Jewish Campaign, died July 12. Mr. Schwartz first became prominent as a campaigner for the Keren Hayesod and for the Zionist organization of Detroit. He was active also in the United Hebrew Schools, where he was chairman of the membership committee.

Alexander Budnitz, 80

BOSTON—Alexander Budnitz, 80, past president of the Zionist organization of Claremont district, N.H., and honorary vice-president of the New England district, died June 28 in Newport, N.H. Mr. Budnitz was the founder and president of Budd's Beverages, Inc., of Newport. He lived in Newport for 46 years.

Henry Kaber, 83

CLEVELAND HEIGHTS, O.—Henry Kaber, father of Rabbi Nathan Kaber of Temple Beth Israel in Altoona, Pa., died July 11 after a brief illness. He was 83. In addition to Rabbi Kaber, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sophia Kaber, and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Davidson and Mrs. Emanuel Raymer.

Julius Fishkind, 46

NEW YORK—Julius Fishkind, 46, architect for Temple Emanuel of Long Beach, L.I., died July 13 in Jamaica, Queens. Mr. Fish-kind was president of Temple Emanu-El of Great Neck, L.I., and a member of the American Institute of Architects. He designed the Brigham Park development of 21 buildings in Brooklyn, Rego Gardens and Rego Terrace in Rego Park, Queens, the shopping center at Somerville-Raritan traffic circle in New Jersey, and other large apartment houses.

'JEWISH TOURISTS GUIDE' IS HISTORY BOOK, ENCYCLOPEDIA

By MEYER LEVIN

THE JEWISH TOURISTS GUIDE TO THE U. S.
By Bernard Postal and Lionel Koppman. Jewish Publication Society. $5.

It is our common impulse, in traveling, to look around, when we come to a new town or city, for signs of Jews—Jewish names on the stores, or maybe a homey-looking delicatessen, and, of course, for a synagogue. Once having located the Jews, there is a feeling of relaxation—we're not alone, in whatever strange place we may find ourselves. In Paris, the touring Jew is likely to visit Flaumbaum's before he checks off of his list any of the famous French restaurants.

It is partly this impulse for Jewish contact that is served by this remarkable and unique tourist guide. For with the Guide in your car, or in your valise, there is no hamlet in the United States where a Jew resides or once resided where you won't be able to satisfy that wish for contact. But the authors have done much more. They have written a history of Jews in America, in terms of personalities and of communities.

For with their notations on each state, city and town, with the address of each Jewish community organization, each synagogue, they provide a gossip but accurate background, telling about the first Jews who came there, and the leading Jewish families, and the achievements, and the legacies and memorials. Their work is amazingly inclusive. If the Riverside church in New York has a portrait of Einstein among the world scientists, this is noted; if a building on Wall Street has a portrait of Rockefeller by a Jewish sculptor, Jo Davidson, this is not forgotten. If the author of "Home, Sweet Home" was the grandson of a Jew, there is a picture of the home on Long Island that belonged to Aaron Isaacs, grandfather of John Howard Payne.

SOME FASCINATING CHARACTERS are given their due. In the account of Sacramento, Cal., for example, we are given a short life history of David Lubin, gold prospector, lumberjack, odd-job man, who established the first "one-price" store in America, and who, after a trip to Palestine in 1884, became intensely interested in the economics of the small farm. This interest resulted in tremendous advances in marketing techniques for fruit and wheat growers in America, in the organization of the first marketing co-operatives, and finally in the idea of forming a world-wide Institute of Agriculture. Unable to find a home for this institute in America, Lubin crusaded all over Europe, and eventually brought his organization to life in—of all places—Mussolini's Rome. The Institute was the prototype of such United Nations' structures as the World Health organization, and is indeed in a way incorporated into the U. N. today.

SUCH ASIDES AS the Lubin story occur in virtually every section of the book. There are historical reminders without number. For instance, there is the tale of August Bondi, type-setter, clerk, school teacher and bartender, who wound up fighting for abolition besides God's Angry Man, John Brown. Another of Brown's recruits was Bondi's friend, Jacob Benjamin, and a third was a brawny, scrapper, the Polish Jew, Theodore Wiener, a storekeeper, who provisioned the 65 men of Osawatomie, and had his store burned down by the enemy.

There was, of course, a Jew in every movement, in every fight, and the Guide proves this, not only with accounts of the first gold rush caravans, and their Jewish drivers, but down to Davy Crockett's Alamo, with the name of Antony Wolfe inscribed among the heroes.

The volume is amazingly detailed, but yet does not lose sight of the grand lines in the development of Jewish communities. The section on New York is almost a book in itself, with the city divided into sections, so that the tourist may satisfy every curiosity, in a series of pleasant walks. This is an indispensable volume, of permanent usefulness, for aside from its value in travel, it is a sort of encyclopedia of Jewish life in America, for use in the home.

THE EDITOR'S CHAIR

I have the following letter from Eddie Tonkon, of Dallas, Texas, who is a vice-president of the American Council for Judaism:

Dear Gabriel:

Even as the more enlightened Zionists are beginning to retreat from the traditional plank in their platform urging all Americans of the Jewish faith to go to Israel, you still, in both your editorial columns and in your own Editor's Chair, continue to advocate such a movement. I am sure that other readers of your paper as well as I, would be interested in knowing why you, yourself, do not go.

Sincerely yours,

EDDIE

This is a legitimate question, even if Eddie is trying to get rid of me.

But first Eddie is wrong when he says that I advocate that "all Americans of the Jewish faith go . . . to Israel."

The POST has been rather specific. Its editorials have invariably used the figure of 5,000 to 10,000 Jews a year. This is one one-thousandth of the Jews of the United States. In other words, in a thousand years, providing there was no growth of United States Jewry, what Eddie says I and other Zionists (he's wrong, too, in saying that responsible Zionists say that all United States Jews should go to Israel) are urging would take place.

My contention has been that there are enough idealists and positive-minded Jews who feel that in Israel they can find the kind of life that would be most fruitful for them, to initiate a flow of 5,000 Zionists to Israel from the United States annually.

Since there are 200,000 Jews in our colleges, if only two or three out of each hundred went to Israel, the 5,000 figure annually would be reached.

But I still haven't answered Eddie's question.

I am planning to live in Israel, but I feel that I have a prior task, and that is to set up The POST solidly enough so that it will in truth be the national Jewish weekly it aims to be.

HOW LONG this will be, I don't know. It could happen in the next five years. But no one can tell when, or even if.

I love Israel. It now remains to be determined if Helen will feel the same way about it. We had planned a trip to Israel this spring, and I already had made plane reservations. But the little one is even now only 10 months old, and Helen did not want to leave her, even for only three weeks.

That's the best answer I can give at the moment. I don't know if Eddie has in mind that I should go to Israel now, and thus turn The POST over to someone else who might not be as Zionistically inclined, or not.

I believe that Eddie will live long enough to see me with a home in Israel. Not only me, but hundreds and even thousands of prominent United States Jews who will do as Harold Goldenberg is doing—live part time in Israel, and part time in the United States.

THIS LETTER from Eddie gives me a chance to get out of my portfolio a little essay I wrote almost two years ago, but have never found a spot to use. I'm sure Eddie will not forgive me, but I can't resist the temptation to get rid of this piece at this point.

The normal person, when he is faced with the necessity for compromise with perfection, makes the compromise without either rejecting life or himself. If he is mature, he accepts his share of the blame, and assays the share that circumstances must bear.

He can remain a perfectionist, as small children are, or he can learn to adjust, and do his bit towards improving life.

The anti-Zionists in Jewish life, facing an imperfect world, ask only that the Zionists be perfectionists. The world can be unjust and even at times inhuman, but the Jews must react not as human beings, or even as super human beings. Jewish tradition recognizes the fallibility of man, but the anti-Zionists recognize only the fallibility of Jews.

Reader Willing To Take Course

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

I am interested in a correspondence course in Hebrew, as mentioned in your column. (Editor's Chair, JP, May 6, 1955).

If it develops, please count me in.

IRVING PICHEL DEFENDED AS CHAMPION OF JEWRY

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

As a friend of Irving Pichel, who died just a year ago this week, I feel that I must take exception to Mr. Schatz' statement, published in your Editor's Chair of Feb. 4, 1955. I meant to write to you about it ever since I read the article in the NJP upon returning from my European trip earlier this year.

It is indeed regrettable that not a single motion picture has been prepared in Hollywood to commemorate the 300th anniversary of American Jewry. But it is even more deplorable that no major studio production ever depicted the plight of European

In Chicago, following the suggestion of Rabbi Ira Eisenstein in The RECONSTRUCTIONIST magazine, there is going on a discussion about the advisability of a Jewish community council.

The demand for community councils grew up in the thirties and the forties when the old federations maintained a stranglehold on everything in local Jewish life.

It took years to change that situation, and today, in most communities, the federation or welfare fund is an arm accepted by most of the community.

Some are more democratic than others. But all are more democratic than they were 20 years ago.

Where the federations resisted democratization, in some cases Jewish community councils were established.

Obviously, a community council is preferable to a federation. But it is far from a guarantee of democracy.

To wait for the time when Jews will all be profound before establishing a community council may be putting it off forever.

Some common sense is needed.

In many communities, as for instance, in Louisville and Indianapolis, federations have added to their boards elected

JWB HAS PROFITED

The Janowsky Report was a sort of roses for the National Jewish Welfare Board, and the organization has not always been free of controversy.

Perhaps it has been the memory of the upheaval caused by the Janowsky Report which taught the JWB leadership a lesson in public relations.

At that time, the Jewish centers were under heavy criticism, most of it valid, for lack of Jewish content in their programs. Professor Janowsky conducted a lengthy survey and came up with a set of proposals which in effect redirected the centers into the mainstream of United States Jewish development.

A few years have elapsed, and although at first there was much wrangling over various phases of the proposals, most of them have by now been fairly representatives of local Jewish organizations as a means of democratizing their structure.

How this could be done in a city as large as Chicago is a problem, but unless the people (or the organizations) elect their own representatives, there will hardly be that feeling of community which is so essential to the proper development of Jewish community life.

You cannot have a nominating committee name members to a board (and in many cases only one name for each place, which cancels out the selection process) and call the organization democratic, despite the fact that nominations are possible from the community at large.

Those who are active in federations know, just like a political boss knows, that this leaves the control of the agency to whoever wishes to control it.

A possible move looking towards an eventual solution of the situation in Chicago is the setting up of a Council of Organizations.

But even before such a possibility should be considered, it would be wise to continue the present discussion pro and con, on as wide a basis as possible, and then in the fall arrange a series of open meetings at which the matter would be gone into further.

well incorporated into actual programming on the local level.

Life has not always been a bed of peaceful revolution, but it did show how an agency of the Jewish community, concerned with the welfare of the Jewish community, could revamp itself and its program to better fill the needs of that community.

There are other instances of the JWB beneficent action, but the one above suffices to show the organization's true concern over filling its job to the best of its ability. As the Jewish community of the United States matures, and as more of our agencies begin to pay more attention to filling needs than to vested interests and maintaining non-existent prestige, the JWB will become less unusual, which we are sure is exactly what it would wish for.

accusations made in the letters from recent emigrants that the new immigrants were being placed in non-religious colonies were accurate. He found the charges to be so after personal investigation.

This is a serious matter.

The Israel government had no right to make the promises if it did not intend to, or could not, keep them.

An investigation must be made to determine the responsible parties.

Less than this will be tantamount to admission of guilt in this most serious case.

during the last 10 years, was not dealing with anti-Semitism in a policy-making position. Hitler's Germany.

Schatz should have addressed his complaint to our studio heads who are decisive in determining the annual production program.

We are told that, when some five years ago, an independent producer contemplated a filmization of John Hersey's "The Wall," our State Department advised him against antagonizing the Germans.

Irving Pichel was one of the first American intellectuals to speak up openly against the oppression of German and Austrian Jewry under the Hitler regime.

He was one of the founders of the anti-Nazi League in this city, back in 1933. For this reason, it became extremely difficult for Pichel to find motion picture assignments in a world which had become too friendly with our former enemies.

During the war, and even earlier, Pichel directed and wrote many films dealing with the plight of the victims of Nazism. Here are just a few:

ZOA ISSUE VERY MUCH ALIVE,
LIPSKY SUPPORTERS INSIST

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

This is by way of answer to your editorial, KICKING A DEAD DOG, in your issue of July 6.

The issue of an active affiliation between the Zionist organization of America and the General Zionist party of Israel still exists simply because the present leaders of the ZOA have never openly stated that the ZOA has an active and official affiliation with the General Zionist party.

The reason for this silence becomes plain when the background of the so-called identification resolutions is studied. The original resolution adopted by the national executive committee in 1951 spoke only of continuing to "maintain close and fraternal relations with it (General Zionist party) in furtherance of common ideals."

In the pamphlet "Identification: Issue or Smoke Screen" (issued by the pro-Miller forces prior to the 1952 convention) the following quote is pertinent: "There was no mention of 'affiliation' and none was intended—other than such association as already existed within the framework of the World Confederation of General Zionists. Even the word 'identification' was not actually used."

The same pamphlet calls attention to the agreement reached between the General Zionists and Progressives at the time of the last Zionist Congress. This agreement was expressed in the following formula:

"Neither of the two parties in Israel desires or seeks further declarations of identification from Zionist organizations outside of Israel."

The actual resolution adopted after the policy debate at the 1952 convention says only that "we extend to them (General Zionists) once more an expression of our cordial friendship and fraternal relations." The same resolution continues:

"The Zionist organization of America has never been and is not now affiliated party-wise with any other Zionist group or party, is bound by no party discipline, reserves its independence and freedom of action and takes no part in the political life of the state of Israel—which is the exclusive function of Israel citizens."

But what has been happening?

Since 1952 many active ZOA members have been receiving the ISRAEL NEWS SERVICE issued by the world Zionist relations committee of the General Zionist organization in Israel. This monthly sheet praises only the General Zionist party and finds fault with about every other party in Israel. In the past it has even attacked the Jewish National Fund. Of the election of Mortimer May it wrote: "It was generally felt that this choice implied a promise of yet closer relations between the General Zionist parties here and in the U. S. A."

The world Zionist affairs department of the ZOA, through much of the material that has appeared in the columns of ZINS, has been helping to create the impression that the ZOA is the counterpart of the General Zionist party in Israel. (ZINS, for example, calls attention regularly to every General Zionist bigwig who visits the United States, but failed to print a single word about the visit of the president of the British Zionist Federation to the United States.)

You say the issue is dead. We wish it were. We would prefer to see the time, money, and energy spent for constructive purposes both in America and

Not Revolution,
Evolution Is Key

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

Mankind has passed trillions of laws trying to make man obey 10 commandments, yet both juvenile and adult delinquency is ever on the increase even in Israel. Why? Because man is not realistic.

Despite what great scientists teach, he refuses to accept the truth that the earth is not the center of a great ever-expanding universe, that creation did in Israel rather than to help build up the General Zionist party in Israel.

Until that time you should know that there are many Zionists (we ourselves know many here in Brooklyn) — not the meager 10 you count—who agree that there should be less not more affiliation, identification, support, or whatever with the General Zionist or any other political party in Israel.

Dr. LOUIS FISHBEIN,
ISRAEL SOIFER.

Brooklyn.

● Editor's Note: The POST was careful not to take a position on the issue, only to challenge Lipsky's methods. We did say that the issue could be revived, but that it would take more than merely issuing a statement by one individual.

not cease in six days but is ever going on, that the present variety of the species man only corresponds to what a child is at three and what he turns out to be as a mature man is different.

The appearance of great men did not cease with the appearance of say, Maimonides. Great men appear again and again with perhaps different conceptions as to what man is.

The variety of man who will sit under his own fig tree will not come by revolution but rather by evolution. The form of society permitting a man to sit under his own fig tree will not be that of a great big state.

All mankind must unite against common enemies like bacteria, virus, etc.

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

After reading so many letters to the editor concerning your column (Women's Viewpoint) I began to wonder why you didn't change the name of the column from Women's Viewpoint to One Woman's Viewpoint, which perhaps it really is.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

This Crockett Would Need Shochet to Slaughter Bear

Davy Crockett, the ubiquitous frontiersman, may have gone West to follow the sun, but some of his descendants apparently were content to stay East and follow Moses. Nine of them, Mr. and Mrs. Huell L. Crockett and seven children of Tallahassee, Fla., the American Jewish Press reports, have adopted the Jewish faith. For the past 13 years they have accepted themselves as members of the 10 lost tribes of Israel. Huell Crockett, an engineer, is a founder and charter member of the United Israel World Union.

Don't Do As I Do

Elder statesman Bernard M. Baruch hasn't reached a hundred yet, but he's already giving advice on the business of aging gracefully. When Baruch limped out of the White House recently after a talk with the President he had this advice for other 85-year-olds: "Don't do a back flip from the high board." Baruch's case wasn't quite as bad as he pictured it. The fabulous financier hadn't actually gone off a high board. He had slipped on the edge of his swimming pool at Hobcaw Barony, S.C., and injured his back painfully.

BARUCH

Plenty Rich

We don't know anything about the financial condition of the Joseph Rich family of Elkins Park, Pa., but they're certainly loaded when it comes to good luck. Bruce Rich, the Rich's youngest son, was scheduled to take a mountain-climbing trip to Mt. Temple in Banff State Park, Alta., which took the lives of seven schoolboys recently. However, his father had a "premonition" and sent him instead to the YMHA Camp Arthur in nearby Montgomery county. Eleven years ago the family similarly avoided another disaster. They were living in Hartford, Conn., on July 6, 1944, when they passed up an opportunity to attend the circus. That day, 169 persons lost their lives in the Barnum and Bailey fire there.

SURPLUS SOLD ISRAEL

WASHINGTON — During the fiscal year which ended June 30, the United States sold Israel about $13 million worth of surplus agricultural products.

Israel's Election May Hinge Mostly On Extraneous Factors

JERUSALEM (JP)—With the Knesset elections just four days away (July 26), and most people decided on how they are going to vote, extraneous factors are gaining in influence over the principal issues.

The most discussed topic on the street is the possible effect of the Israel Kastner case (JP, July 1, '55). Even taxi drivers, when asked about the elections, hark back to events of 11 years ago and denounce Dr. Kastner "and all those people" for rescuing a few hundred Hungarian Jews from the Nazis at the price of the lives of all others in the country.

One newspaper, the General Zionists' HABOKER, has said that evidence in the Kastner trial showed that Premier Moshe Sharett concealed knowledge that the Hungarian Jews were being systematically destroyed for two months in 1944. Sharett has countered the accusation with a personal letter, saying that immediately on learning of the Hungarian situation he had taken measures to arouse public protests.

AT POLITICAL rallies, managers have added dancing, entertainment, and other frivolities and are scheduling their speakers first, in order to get the crowds to sit through the speeches. Even at that, however, most of those who endure the speakers are young people who enjoy the dancing.

With people thinking seriously about Israel's future policy toward neighboring Arab countries and the world powers, as many Israelis are, policy issues should determine the vote.

Each ballot cast goes for one of 23 lists of candidates, rather than for individual leaders, and after the votes are counted Knesset seats are allocated among the lists in accordance with the proportion of the total vote received.

Political differences among parties are slight, however, and it is hard to tell who is running

Buying Votes Might Be Cheaper

JERUSALEM — Israel's election campaign is going to cost the nation's 23 political parties and groups a pretty penny—to be more nearly precise, about 12 million Israel pounds ($6.66 million).

This exceeds by 2 million Israel pounds the costs of the British general elections of last May. The cost of the election propaganda per voter in Israel is, according to the JEWISH OBSERVER AND MIDDLE EAST REVIEW, 30 times greater than in Great Britain.

a campaign meeting without seeing the party's identification—each party uses a letter of the Hebrew alphabet—before going in.

ISSUES UNDER consideration include Israel's orientation to the Western powers and the Communist bloc, Israel's border-defense situation, emphasis on government financing or private enterprise, and the national wage freeze.

One of the questions being asked is whether Israel should strike back every time an infiltrator attacks or rely on "restrained reprisals."

There are coalitions of opinion on each issue, exactly as there have been on every issue since the government's inception. Most voters say, moreover, that they hope no party will win a majority, that coalition is best.

Latest forecasts of results say that Mapai will have about the same number of seats after the election as it has now, with the second strongest party, the General Zionists, also close to its present number. Any swing, if there is a swing, probably will go away from Mapai and to the General Zionists or to extremist groups.

Almost all Israelis concede that Mapai still will be the dominant party in the country and that Defense Minister David Ben-Gurion will return to the premiership, in place of Sharett.

Bombs Disturb Quiet Campaign

TEL AVIV (JP)—A series of bombings of newspaper offices and election meetings during the past two months has disturbed responsible Israelis.

Many Israelis fear that the outrages may give observers abroad a distorted picture of the electioneering atmosphere here. Electioneering has been clean and fair so far, and no explanation for the bombings has come up.

Police are baffled by the terrorism, which started May 26 when dynamite with a lighted fuse attached was discovered at the door of the Hebrew news weekly HAOLEM HAZAH in Tel Aviv. On July 5 a bomb exploded in the garden of ZOA house in Tel Aviv and two persons were injured. The motives of attack was unclear but there was a meeting of the General Zionist party going on inside at the time.
